The auditors of Stark, Mahoning and Columbiana counties met at the office of the Stark Electric railroad in Alliance last Thursday and appraised the line for taxation. Farmers of Beaver and Fairfield townships who ship milk to Youngstown are said to have sustained considerable loss by reason of having to kill cows inspected and found to be suffering from tuberculosis. A meeting was held in Columbiana last Friday to organize a mutual insurance company for the protection of its members. The plan is to insure each member's cattle and in case one has to be killed the insurance will cover the loss.

Many of the boys and girls want to leave the farm, and in this line out of ten of them will make a mistake. Business in the cities is conducted with such fierce competition that only a few can succeed, and why should a farm boy or girl leave a life of independence for one of dependence? The farm offers splendid opportunities to the young man to make a moderate fortune. Not large, but a handsome estate. The study of the tilling of the soil, the raising of fruit and stock, culture of berries, making cheese and other branches of farming, is most interesting and profitable. Young man, think twice before you leave the farm.—Carroll Chronicle.

Louisville Herald: No town, country or community will ever prosper where there is a division or strife of any nature. In helping others you invariably help yourself. "Opposition is the life of trade," and merit wins. No town will prosper and grow where a lack of enterprise and push on the part of its citizens is felt. The true motto of each and every citizen of a town is and should be to assist and help your neighbors, encourage business of all kinds, meet no danger in going the market in this line—write in the matter of improvement in making the town attractive and giving it a home like appearance. When this is done people from a distance will form a good opinion of the place and it will be an inducement for them to locate with us and become permanent and substantial citizens.

CONGRESSMAN KENNEDY PLAYED

Under the heading, "Cannon's Congressman Kennedy," the republican Cleveland Leader on Monday printed the following:

Representative James Kennedy, of the Eighteenth Ohio district opened his campaign for a fifth term Saturday as a "stand-patter," a Cannonite, a Bourbon. His courage was undeniable; his candor, admirable; his discretion, another matter.

In 1908, when Mr. Kennedy was elected for a fourth term, he carried his district by a plurality of 3,247. It consists of three republican counties—Columbiana, Mahoning and Stark. On the same day Taft carried these three counties by a plurality of 5,144. The President's margin exceeded Representative Kennedy's by 1,917, in the latter's district.

Such conditions might well suggest the light step, the careful touch, the soft word that turn away wrath, but Mr. Kennedy chooses a different course. He resents criticism, defies opposition, strikes right and left at republicans who try to keep their party in the van of the nation's progress, leading and guiding its work of construction and conservation. The speech of the Eighteenth district Representative might have been revised by Cannon and endorsed by Aldrich. It spoke their tongue and voiced their sentiments. The republicanism it preached was not the creed of Roosevelt, not the doctrine of Taft. It was not the faith of the growing and growing elements of Mr. Kennedy's party.

Nor was this opening speech fair and just. It was inaccurate in its specific attacks upon republicans of different views. It distorted the tariff pledges of the republican national platform, in 1908. It presumed grossly upon the forgetfulness or the carelessness of Mr. Kennedy's hearers in attributing the protests of newspapers and magazines against tariff Bourbonism to the pecuniary interest of publishers in free wood pulp and print paper.

Intelligent men know that the printed criticisms of the Payne-Aldrich law have been centered almost wholly upon other articles than wood pulp and print paper. Americans who recall the recent history of their country remember that throughout Mr. Taft's campaign he interpreted the promise of his party's platform that there should be tariff revision, as a pledge of revision downward. And the country knows that such was the understanding of republicans everywhere. Taft was elected in that faith. In that belief the people chose a republican majority of the House of Representatives to support his administration in redeeming the party's pledge.

These are facts which cannot be pushed out of the way. They are too well known to be effectively denied, too vital to be made light of, too plain to be obscured. They confront Representative Kennedy now. They will face him to the end of his campaign. He must win at the polls, if he can win at all, carrying the heavy handicap of his virtual repudiation of his party's promises.

As for the Leader, this paper counts the condemnation visited upon it by Mr. Kennedy as a tribute to its capacity for progress and its ability to keep in touch with the spirit of the times. And it does not follow the Eighteenth district's representative when he says that "it turned from being a good republican, protection tariff journal to Democratic free trade principles as suddenly as Saul of Tarsus was stricken blind."

Our readers know how absurd this accusation is. They understand how far the Leader's independent republicanism is from democracy. They are not blind to the difference between tariff reform and free trade. They cannot be misled into believing that it is untrue to republicanism and Americanism to stand with Roosevelt and Taft for the redemption of republican pledges.

As to Mr. Kennedy's campaign for re-election, the outlook is not over-rosy. Viewed from the standpoint of mechanical efficiency and judged by the standards of the photograph and the jumping jack, his congressional record is satisfactory. He has been a hewer of wood and a carrier of water up to the Cannon standard. So far as heavy-handed and pudgy-brained loyalty to his boss may appeal to the people, his record will appeal. Beyond that Mr. Kennedy's past congressional service will not particularly fire the imagination. He begins his campaign with statements which, to be polite and polysyllabic, may be termed disingenuous, although a shorter and uglier word would serve. He will doubtless continue his canvass along similar lines.

The heavily republican district he misrepresents may return him to Washington through force of habit. But if the Eighteenth district holds the principles of the republican party dearer than the habit of partisanship, if its voters would have a hand in the upbuilding of the people's congress which ultimately must destroy the Cannon machine, they will send a democrat to congress for a term. And doing that, they will point a moral for future congressional primaries and conventions that will make for the lasting good of a party which, in wisdom and progress and patriotism, has had a larger part in the nation's history than any other the country has ever known.

MAKES APPEAL FOR AID

WIFE OF RICH BANKER WANTS HUSBAND'S SUPPORT.

Lives in Flat With Only Borrowed Cot, Two Chairs and Table for Accommodations.

New York, June 8.—In one of the most expensive apartments at the Dakota, stripped of $20,000 worth of furnishings, Mrs. Claudia T. Wheeler, wife of a millionaire banker, informed the supreme court that she had been living with only a cot, two chairs and a table—borrowed from the servants—for accommodations.

This statement of the condition in which her husband, Albert G. Wheeler, Jr., a former Chicagoan, left her at the time when he took up separate apartments, is contained in Mrs. Wheeler's affidavits submitted in connection with her plea for $20,000 a year alimony pending the action for trial for a separation. Although Mr. Wheeler is connected with the banking firm of J. B. Russell & Co. and is alleged by his wife to have an income of over $125,000 a year, he contended that his financial condition is such that he cannot afford to pay Mrs. Wheeler more than $40 a week. Justice McCall, however, signed an order granting Mrs. Wheeler alimony of $10,000 a year.

The papers that are on file show that the power of the law was invoked in the Wheeler household only after several lawyers had conferred upon the best way to arrange a private separation agreement. The plan fell through when the millionaire banker sent his wife a check for $10 on April 25 last and informed her that he would allow her this amount each week. She sent the checks back and appealed to the court for an allowance in proportion to their style of living which cost as high, she claims, as $60,000 a year. Mr. Wheeler takes occasion to deny most of the allegations that his wife makes concerning his financial status.

AMERICAN HEIRESS WEDDED

Miss Margaretta Drexel Becomes the Wife of Viscount Maidstone, Son of British Earl.

London, June 8.—Another international romance having for its principals the provincial American heiress and the penniless nobleman, culminated here today when Margaretta Drexel, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel, became the wife of Viscount Maidstone, eldest son of the earl of Winchelsea and Nottingham. The ceremony was performed in St. Margaret's, Westminster, the church attached to the house of parliament, by the bishop of London, and was the most fashionable wedding of the present season.

While Miss Drexel has obtained an ancient title and all the debts that go with it, the viscount has married the most sought after American heiress in years. Her father, Anthony J. Drexel, is the head of the famous Philadelphia banking house of that name, and his fortune is estimated at $30,000,000.

"Sure Cure"

"I would like to guide suffering women to a sure cure for female troubles," writes Mrs. R. E. Mercer, of Frozen Camp, W. Va. "I have found no medicine equal to Cardui. I had suffered for about four years. Would have headache for a week at a time, until I would be nearly crazy. I took Cardui and now I never have the headache any more."

Take CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

The pains from which many women suffer every month are unnecessary. It's not safe to trust to strong drugs, right at the time of the pains. Better to take Cardui for a while, before and after, to strengthen the system and cure the cause. This is the sensible, scientific, right way. Try it.
